What is the world you envision in the future? The Utah Society for Environmental Education (USEE) envisions a world where environmental and outdoor learning opportunities are a basic human right. It’s a world where every school has an outdoor classroom and every teacher is equipped to foster wonder, curiosity, and exploration in the places we live and play. USEE, the Utah affiliate of the North American Association for Environmental Education, is working to make this vision a reality in Utah.

Environmental learning is intertwined with quality education practices, social and emotional learning, science and civics education among other disciplines, and well-being in Utah and around the world. Yet, there is still much to be done to create a future where 100% of Utahns are learning about the natural systems we all depend on and understand what we must do to interact responsibly with our environment and safeguard natural resources for future generations.

For 40 years, USEE has worked to support the educators who teach about the concepts we all need to understand. These educators reach hundreds of students each year. You can help us achieve our vision of a culture of environmental literacy, knowledge and action to create a sustainable future for Utah today by becoming a sponsor.

Your sponsorship supports:
- High-quality environmental education professional learning opportunities with nationally recognized programs like Project Learning Tree and Project WET, impacting over 6,300 students per year.
- The Utah Green Schools Awards Program, leading to entire schools engaging in sustainability, student health and environmental learning efforts.
- The Utah Environmental Education Conference where over 100 environmental educators come together to learn and grow.
- Award and recognition programs like the Vern A. Fridley Environmental Educator of the Year award and the Beehive 5 Under 25, honoring youth doing distinguished work in the field of environmental education.

Sponsors at all levels are recognized for their contributions to our important work, Please join us in elevating environmental education in Utah.

To me, there's nothing quite as important as empowering the next generation to love nature. I enjoy being a part of USEE because everyone involved prioritizes safe, equitable, and inclusive access to nature for every child in our state. Members come from a variety of backgrounds, so every time we come together I learn something new to sharpen my EE skills and to improve my professional practices. USEE enriches my life and the lives of children throughout Utah.

-Kylie Jones-Greenwood, Tracy Aviary and 2019 Vern A. Fridley Environmental Educator of the Year

Throughout an extremely challenging year for students, families, and environmental educators, USEE has been there to help us adapt while keeping our community safe. USEE has provided invaluable guidance on practices for health and safety, and equity and inclusion in our field. This guidance, along with opportunities to collaborate and learn from fellow educators has helped me feel confident and empowered to adapt our programs so we can continue serving our community under unprecedented circumstances. USEE is an asset to me, my organization and all those who care about protecting the natural world.
